Rutherford's Translation of Matt. 3; 22-30.

And the Scribes from who from Jerusalem had come down were saying -

He hath Beelzebub, and in the ruler of the devils casteth he out the devils.

And calling them near,
in parables began he to say unto them -

How can Satan cast Satan out?

And if a kingdom against itself be divided, that kingdom cannot be made to stand;

And if a house against itself be divided, the house shall be unable to stand;

And if Satan hath risen up against himself and become divided he cannot stand, but hath an end.

But no one is able into the mighty one to enter and his spoils to carry off, unless first the mighty one be bound, and then his house will be plundered!

Verily I say unto you -

All things shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, - The sins and the profanities whereunto they shall profane;

But whosoever shall revile against the Holy Spirit

Heath no forgiveness, unto times age-abiding -

But is guilty of an age-over sin;

because they were saying An impure spirit he hath!
