[3] 2

"The day is at hand".

"Who is it that mourns for the days that are gone when a noble could do as he liked with his own."

A story has been recently published in an English Review of a Member of Parliament. He said:
"It was then I was moved to pray. I prayed

that night that life might not be in vain; that in particular I might not live in vain. I prayed for strength and faith, that the monstrous blundering forces in life might not overwhelm me,
might not beat me back to futurity and a meaningless acquiescence in existing things.

[4] 4

I knew myself for the weakling I was. I knew that nevertheless it was set for me to make such order as I could out of these disorders, and my task covered me, gave me at the thought of it, a sense of yielding feebleness. Break me, O God, I prayed at last; disgrace me, torment me, destroy me, as you will, but

Saw me from self - <sup>[5]</sup> 5 comproanay and little interests and little success es, and the life that passes like the shadow of a dream."
